ANNEX II

THE STORY OF MISSIONARY TEAVA

(As documented by author Richard Lovett)

In his work among the heathen, Teava had proved himself apt to teach and as the result of his labors, whole tribes abandoned idolatry and expressed their readiness to place themselves under Christian instruction. He was the first Christian evangelist sent to Samoa and Manono, and in the Samoan Islands he spent more than 20 years. With his life in his hand, writes Mr. Buzacott, he traveled in an open canoe from island to island striving to remove the prejudices of the people, and to prepare the natives to receive European missionaries. He subsequently returned to his native island of Rarotonga, where he spent the evening of his days.

During the last 9 years I have seen much of Teava, and learned to admire the man. He lived much in prayer, and in the study of God's word. At prayer-meetings he was always first there, coming at least half an hour before anyone else so that he might have time to pray and receive a blessing for himself and others before the service began. He was never absent from the deacons' Saturday afternoon prayer-meeting. He was always ready to speak to the church, ever pointing the members to Christ and warning them against the many evils to which they are exposed. From his long, true and earnest life, he was able to speak to them as only very few could. He spoke very plainly, not at all mincing matters when occasion required. He had great regard for the Pilgrim's Progress, and his delight was to have me sit with him and go over a part of Christians' journey to Mount Zion, the heavenly Jerusalem.

From his position in the island he was able to speak faithfully to the chiefs. He rejoiced greatly in the good the present Makea has been the means of doing. For 5 weeks before his death he was unable to attend the services in church, but he welcomed any who could spend a short time with him in prayer in his own house. He told me some days before he died that he was just waiting on; he knew the Master had sent for him. He said he was done with all below, and looked only for Christ's presence. Not in what he had done did he trust, but in the cross of Christ alone. On 16 March he asked for a little food. It was given him but he could not eat it; he got up and walked a very short distance in the house, then he said "I think the messenger has come to fetch me; I shall die." His wife and another woman laid him down on his mat, when he quietly passed away. Teava died in the spring of 1876.

What a change! In his youth he was a heathen, had fought with, and had captured men and cooked and helped to eat them. In his manhood he was converted to Christ, became a true soldier of the Cross, and led many to the Saviour. In his death he trusted alone to Christ, conquered death in Christ, and went up to hear Him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Extracted from "James Chalmers, his autobiography and letters" by Richard Lovett (5th edition), published by the Religious Tract Society, 1903, pp. 114-115. Some of the old English expressions are no longer used today. Note: there was no mention of Teava's second name in the autobiography and it is not clear whether Teava is the family or surname.

- Prepare and conduct the regular meetings of the council
- Spearhead implementation of resolutions passed by the council for the benefit of branches under the jurisdiction of the council

- Conflict resolution – deal with problems that may arise in the branches; if they cannot be resolved, refer them to the country/island-level council in the first instance, or the Executive Council if necessary
- In the case of NZ and Australia, formulate remits for submission to the country-level council
- In the case of NZ and Australia, the city/town-level council is expected to advise the country-level council on possible new church branches
- Monitor implementation of those policies and resolutions passed by the general assembly that will impact on council member churches
- Devise a work programme for the council for its consideration prior to implementation
- Set and advise as appropriate, group visitation programmes

5. No Council required

Where there is only one church branch on an island or in a city (e.g. Atiu, Townsville, Rotorua), there will be no council. A council will only exist where there is more than one church branch as in the examples given above.
